Scene inside a busy hospital lobby, A patient walks up to the front desk, looks visibly exhausted, and receives an overwhelmingly towering stack of physical documents*

Patient(whispering) Are you being serious? All of these? Right now?

Receptionist: Yes sir, every single one of them needs a signature before we can proceed with your file.

The patient pulls out a pen and starts signing paper after paper. Then, he starts to feeling exhausted*

Patient: My arm is going to fall off... how is this still a thing in this day and age?

The patient finally finished singing the pile of papers.

Patient: There you are, now am i free?

Receptionist: Yes sir, but we need you to take those papers to the building in front, there you will be attended.

Patient: There is not worker at this job?

Receptionist: Yes sir, it must be 15 dollars!

Patient: Just let me take them.

Receptionist: Have a nice day!

Already outside the building, the entire stack of paper fell down from his arms, dropping hundreds of sheets across the pavement, and letting others fly into the air*

Patient: You've got to be kidding meeeee.

A man uutdoors approaches and immediately drops to his knees to help the patient*

Man Outdoors:Let me give you a hand here, that is for real an insane amount of paper. Did you just rob a stationery store or something?

Patient: Yeah, really funny. I just walked out of a medical appointment. I lliterally spent hours inside signing forms, consents, health histories AND MORE. I can't believe a modern hospital still uses tons of physical paper for everything.

Man Outdoors: Paper? Seriously? Man, you must be going to the wrong places.

Patient: What do you mean? Every clinic does this.

Man Outdoors: What world are you living in? I'm Eze, nice to meet you man. I'm from the Hospital de Clínicas and i promise, thanks to the brand-new digital transformation and implementation with KGA, physical paperwork is a thing of the past.

Patient: Nice to meet you bro, Are you really telling me they are completely paperless? How does that even work?

Eze: Easy man, everything you have to know is in their own online platform. You access it right from your phone or computer. No lines, no endless forms, and zero trees wasted.

Patient: You're telling me I spent three hours today signing these dead trees for nothing?

Eze: Im afraid so. Anyways, welcome to the future, man.

Narrator: Efficiency, security and no more tree wasting, healthcare are no longer just a vision, not they are reality. Hospital de Clínicas and KGA are transforming patient care by leaving the paperwork behind.
